

Keynote Presenter – Xin Wei Wang, PhD

Xin Wei Wang, PhD, a Senior Investigator, Co-Director of the NCI CCR Liver Cancer Program, Deputy Lab Chief of the NCI CCR Laboratory of Human Carcinogenesis; a world-renowned cancer biologist with a special focus on functional genomics of liver cancer using genome-scale technologies paired with several international collaborative initiatives and clinical studies; co-PI of the NCI Liver Moonshot. He served on the ILCA Governing Board, President of the SCBA Baltimore-DC Chapter, and currently President-elect of CALS, among other intramural and extramural committees and societies. He is recipients of the NIH Director's Award, NCI Director's Award and the NCI Mentor of Merit Award. He is also a recipient of an Honorary Professorship from Fudan University, among others. He co-authors over 200 scientific papers in peer-reviewed journals, such as Cancer Cell, Cell, Nature, Nature Genetics, Nature Medicine, New England Journal of Medicine, Science, etc, with H-index of 70 (17,908 total citations) by Web of Science as of 02/2020. He received his PhD training from New York University School of Medicine.